 Editors Choice  Cellar Selection

93 Cordero di Montezemolo 2004 Enrico VI (Barolo); $75. Enrico VI ushers forth generous layers of milk chocolate, spice, creamy vanilla and red cherry. The wine boasts deep concentration, bright berry flavors and firm tannins that make a big and bold impact in the mouth: it's plush, smooth and seductive on the finish. Drink 2012 to 2020. Imported by Omniwines Distribution. —M.L.

93 Cordero di Montezemolo 2004 Bricco Gattera (Barolo); $75. This is a full and generous wine with a modern twist that adds concentration and power. Spice, dark chocolate, coffee and licorice steal the show and leave a lasting impression in the mouth. The wine is clean and pristine thanks to its well-integrated tannins and acidity. Drink after 2015. Imported by Omniwines Distribution. —M.L.

91 Cordero di Montezemolo 2005 Monfalletto (Barolo); $40. Barolo Monfalletto offers huge bang for your buck. The wine is rich and velvety with dense aromas of chocolate fudge, exotic spice, dark licorice and chewy fruit. Blueberry, dried lavender and Christmas spice accent the wine's naturally velvety feel and bright finish. Pair this wine with lamb chops scottadito. Imported by Omniwines Distribution. Editors' Choice. —M.L.

92 Cordero di Montezemolo 2005 Bricco Gattera (Barolo); $75. Barolo Bricco Gattera delivers a full palette of aromas that are characteristics of the Nebbiolo grape. You'll recognize luscious berry fruit, wet earth, leather, tobacco, licorice and white truffle. The wine boasts excellent concentration, good acidity, firm tannins and an elegant finish. Drink after 2012. Imported by Omniwines Distribution. —M.L.

92 Cordero di Montezemolo 2005 Enrico VI (Barolo); $75. Enrico VI reveals an elegant persona that is very much in line with Barolo tradition. The wine exudes fruit, especially wild berries and white cherries, and offers delicate shadings of cola, tea and black licorice. There is a sharp, thorny edge to the mouthfeel that will soften with time. Drink after 2015. Imported by Omniwines Distribution. —M.L.
